The Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders at Emerson College is seeking to fill an open rank, tenured or tenure-track, full-time position. Applications from junior and senior faculty, at all levels, are encouraged. We will consider individuals with expertise in any area of Speech-Language Pathology, with priority given to those with teaching experience in voice disorders, swallowing, or adult neurogenic disorders. The position involves teaching at the graduate and undergraduate levels both in person and online. The appointment begins August 23, 2018.

Required qualifications include: a doctorate in Communication Disorders or a related discipline; prior experience teaching within a diverse student body; and a demonstrated ability to sustain an active research program. ASHA certification in Speech-Language Pathology is preferred. The successful candidate must have the ability to work effectively with faculty, students, and staff from diverse backgrounds.

Emerson College is committed to an active, intentional, and ongoing engagement with diversity—in people, in the curriculum, in the co-curriculum, and in the college’s intellectual, social, cultural, and geographical communities. Emerson endorses a framework of inclusive excellence, which recognizes that institutional excellence comes from fully engaging with diversity in all aspects of institutional activities. Therefore, we strongly encourage applications from candidates who can demonstrate through their teaching, research and service that they can contribute to our excellence in this area.

The Communication Sciences and Disorders program at Emerson, one of the oldest and most respected in the country, is highly ranked among the most competitive graduate programs in communication disorders in the US. The department offers state-of-the-art, accessible, on-campus clinical facilities and a wide array of off-campus clinical sites, integrating our students, faculty, and program with our neighborhood and regional communities.

Emerson College is the nation’s only four-year institution dedicated exclusively to majors in communication and the arts in a liberal arts context. Its main campus is located in the center of the dynamic multicultural city of Boston, in close proximity to major publishing houses, arts institutions and research centers. The college also has campuses in Los Angeles and the Netherlands. Emerson College enrolls over 4,300 graduate and undergraduate students from more than 70 countries and all 50 states.

To apply, please submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching and research statements, names of three references who will contacted when the applicant becomes a candidate for the position (not to be contacted without candidates approval), and evidence of effective teaching, including most recent course evaluations. Application and all materials must be submitted through our faculty applicant tracking system at the following link: http://emerson.peopleadmin.com/postings/15807.

Questions about the position should be directed to Vinoth Jagaroo, Ph.D. (Search Committee Chair) at vinoth_jagaroo@emerson.edu. Review of applications will begin December 1, 2017 and will continue until the position is filled.
