

Brown University
Department of Education
Visiting Assistant Professor in Human Development

Brown University's Department of Education seeks to hire a full-time Visiting Assistant Professor in Human Development for the academic year 2012-13. The appointment starts on July 1, 2012. The successful candidate is expected to have earned a doctorate degree in child (human) development, psychology, or educational psychology with expertise in developmental contexts of race, ethnicity, and culture. The successful candidate will also be expected to supervise students' research, theses, and other academic learning engagements. This position will be responsible to teach four courses, including Contemporary Social Problems: Views from Human Development and Education, History and Theories of Child Development, and one of the methods courses for undergraduate and graduate students.

Deadline for receipt of applications to receive full consideration is April 27, 2012. Please send a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, two writing samples, and three letters of reference to: Assistant to the Faculty Search Committee, at educationfacultysearch@brown.edu. Please put the position title in the subject line. Brown University is an EEO/Affirmative Action Employer. Minorities and women are encouraged to apply. For information about the department, our web page is accessible at: www.brown.edu/education.