Learning in a Changing World

21 – 22 November 2014

A major international conference to be held in central London and convened jointly by the Institute of Education, University of London and Beijing Normal University

Call for papers

This conference will examine both theory and practice in learning, and contributions are sought from:
• academics and researchers from education and related disciplines;
• teachers and other educational practitioners;
• those working for national or local government and related agencies.

Papers are invited for inclusion in one of the seven conference strands:

1. Learning and inclusion
2. Learning across the life course
3. Learning and the teacher
4. Learning and child development
5. Learning and creativity
6. Changing modes of learning
7. Policy and learning

Go to www.ioe.ac.uk/learning2014 for more information.

Submissions will be peer reviewed. The review process has two stages, beginning with submission of a short abstract. Abstracts should be written in English, and should be around 1,000 words.

Please submit your abstracts to internationaloffice@ioe.ac.uk by 30 April 2014.
