

Job Description

This form summarises the purpose of the job and lists its key tasks. It is not a definitive list of all the tasks to be undertaken as those can be varied from time to time at the discretion of the School, in consultation with the post holder.

Job title: Lecturer in Social Psychology / Organisational Social Psychology Ref no.: 1244839

Department/Division: Institute of Social Psychology (ISP) Accountable to: Head of ISP

Job Summary:

The post-holder will:

- make an active contribution to the intellectual life of the Institute, conducting research on real world issues in one or more areas of interest to the Institute.
- contribute to and develop the teaching of the Institute.
- contribute to the administration and governance of the Institute and the School.

Duties/Responsibilities

Research

Engaging in research work. The successful candidate will be expected to contribute collaboratively to the scholarship and intellectual life of the Institute and the School. (S)he will develop a body of high quality publications in peer reviewed outlets, and present research at national and international conferences.

Attracting and managing grants, including the recruitment and supervision of any additional research staff required to fulfil the contracts.

Disseminating knowledge through public activities and organising conferences which further enhance the scholarly reputation of the School nationally and internationally.

Initiating and developing links within academia and beyond.

Teaching

Engaging in teaching, conducting such lectures and classes and undertaking such other duties, including examination work, as prescribed by the Head of Institute. The range of teaching and examining duties may change from time to time.

Developing course proposals, shaping and influencing curriculum.

Administrative responsibilities in respect of student services, student recruitment and advice as well as participating in aspects of School governance by serving on School committees.

Acting as an academic advisor to students allocated by the Head of the Institute.

Selecting and supervising students as appropriate.

The successful candidate will be expected to contribute to the social life of the Institute and the School in a collegial spirit.

Note

The LSE has a progressive pay structure that rewards you with annual pay increases up to a certain level as you develop in your role. We also provide for further reward past this point in the form of further pay increases based on exceptional performance.

Flexibility

To deliver services effectively, a degree of flexibility is needed, and the post holder may be required to perform work not specifically referred to above.

Environmental Sustainability

The post holder is required to minimise environmental impact in the performance of the role, and actively contribute to the delivery of the LSE Environmental Policy.